

Behavioral Risk Management

Understand the psychology of risk

Effective risk management involves a combination of quantitative and qualitative skills. Qualitative skills do not substitute, but instead complement and support quantitative skills. This course presents a framework for managing risks that relate to human psychology. In this regard, virtually every major risk management failure, if not catastrophe, in recent years has had psychological pitfalls at its root.

If you are responsible for risk management or wish to have a better awareness of risks within your organization, if you interact with risk managers, or if you are a risk manager yourself, then this program will help you better understand the psychology of risk. At its core, the psychology of risk pertains to emotions, framing, personality, and judgmental errors. Through this program, you will acquire a vocabulary and skill set for analyzing the psychological dimension of risk management issues, thereby improving your effectiveness and the efficacy of your organization.

How you will benefit

- Learn to identify how psychological hard wiring predisposes people to make systematic mistakes in the assessment and taking of risk
- Be able to assess and describe how risk management culture determines levels of operational risk
- Measure the reflection of sentiment in pricing and its connection to value and risk
- Understand how behavioral frameworks can be used to foster a risk management mindset for all professionals within the organization
- Build a behavioral toolkit through the use of case studies during the program

This program is eligible for 12 CE credit hours as granted by CFA Society VBA Netherlands

Faculty

Hersh Shefrin is the Mario L. Belotti Professor of Finance at Santa Clara University. He is one of the pioneers in the behavioral approach to economics and finance. The January 2001 issue of CFO magazine listed him among the academic stars of finance. A 2003 article in the American Economic Review listed him as one of the top fifteen economic theorists to have influenced empirical work. In 2009, his behavioral finance book Beyond Greed and Fear \(2000\) was recognized by J.P. Morgan Chase as one of the top ten books published since 2000.

Professor Shefrin is regarded as the world's foremost authority on the importance of incorporating behavioral awareness into the world of finance. Among his other books are Behavioral Risk Management (2015); Behavioralizing Finance (2009); Ending the Management Illusion (2008); Behavioral Corporate Finance (2007); A Behavioral Approach to Asset Pricing (2005). His work with Meir Statman received the William Sharpe Award Best Paper Award for the article "Behavioral Portfolio Theory," published in the Journal of Financial and Quantitative Analysis, and a Graham and Dodd scroll from the Association of Investment Management Research.

Hersh Shefrin received his PhD from the London School of Economics in 1974. He also holds an honorary doctorate from the University of Oulu, Finland. He is frequently interviewed by the press and his work was profiled by BBC-TV in February 2014. He writes a regular blog for Forbes, intermittently writes for The Wall Street Journal, The Huffington Post, and Vox, and can be followed on twitter at @HershShefrin.
